Silver Anniversary

FROM A DIRTY little town with muddy streets, windmills, and kerosene lamps, the Round Rock of twenty-five years ago has grown into the thriving community its citizens of 1938 know and enjoy. Round Rock is proud of its past, proud of the progress which has marked the passing of the years, but, while recording briefly here those things which have been accomplished in the days that have gone before, the people turn their faces to the rising sun of the newer day which they see now dawning.

Beginning 25 years ago, with the incorporation of the town in 1913, a series of progressive steps marks the passing of the intervening years. A new three story brick school building in 1914 was the first development, followed in swift Round Rock's first pumper is shown here. This old machine is now retired but may be seen on City Hall lawn. A Model "T" replaced it several years ago.

The Model "T" was, in its turn, replaced by the new engine shown below. This improvement came in 1938.

Only twenty miles away, construction on the great Marshall Ford Dam on the Colorado River is going forward at a rapid rate, insuring the citizens of this city and of this section of Texas a place for healthful recreation. Round Rock is well located near Central Texas' new system of lakes.

In looking toward a future that has bright prospects, those whose efforts have made this progress possible should not be forgotten. The first city council was composed of men who worked earnestly to bring about the incorporation of the town. They were: John A. Nelson, Dr. W. G. Weber, E. J. Walsh, J. C. Jackson, M. A. Gantt, and A. K. Anderson.

Jack Jordon, the first mayor, has been city secretary since 1914. The other mayors during these 25 years:

THE REACH OF TREACHEROUS BRAZOS RIVER FLOOD WATERS SPEEDS GAS TO ROUND ROCK

When Brazos River reached record flood stage of 41 feet in 1936 bridge suspending 16-inch pipeline carrying natural gas south to Round Rock went out. Immediately Community Gas men went into action to build this new and stronger bridge within a few months. Now natural gas bound for Round Rock is safe from future Brazos flood waters in a huge pipeline suspended 20 feet above 1936 flood level. This is just part of a gas man's work to make certain the dependability of Round Rock's gas supply for its comfort and progress these next 25 years.

We, the people of Round Rock are proud of the progress that has been made here in the past 25 years. Come to Round Rock to live and help us make still greater progress in the next 25 years.
