

Ducks are Stupid
By Graham Cutler

They run when outsiders come
When they just want to feed them
They refuse to walk from their group
Despite any need or danger

They fight for the authority of alpha
While their authority means nothing
They are tiny, ignorant, and innocent
In the vastness of the earth

They repeatedly make harmful choices
No matter how many times it hurts
They are content with their tiny role
Within the universe

We are ducks

We shun those who look different
While they mirror us on the inside
We will not choose what is right
Over what is popular

We fight for fleeting fame and power
When it doesn't even matter
Our actions are insignificant
Compared to the scale of the universe

We stubbornly fight for what we believe
When our actions do nothing
But unlike ducks, we are not content
Instead, we dream for the stars
